GARRETT MURPHY

The following article was written and contributed by Mrs. Ruby Cason Iliff of N-2506 Denver, Spokane, Washington 99207.

A most valued friend once said to me, "A fool will never change his mind, but a wise man will". I may never be considered as judicious as the hero of this sketch, even though I've changed my mind many times concerning the writing of it. Not that my interest in the project waned, but because of my inability to do him justice caused my hand to falter.

From the very beginning of his long and turbulent life, Garrett "Dink" Murphy, met and conquered life's problems and radiated into the lives of his fellow man the adage, "I am the master of my fate and the captain of my soul".

Garrett, or Uncle Dink, Murphy, as he was commonly and affectionately known, was born the only child and son of Susan Lee Cason and Arnold Murphy. Susan Lee Cason was the daughter of Silas and Abigail (Langford) Cason. Records differ as to her birth place, but it is believed that she was born the 20th of October 1830 in Lowndes County, Georgia - that being the home of her parents in 1830 where they were registered as charter members of the Columbia Primitive Baptist Church.

Garrett Murphy was born 14 Jan. 1850 in Madison County, Florida. Because of his being no bigger than a large sized lobster at birth and very puny in his adolescence, the nick name of Dink for dinky, meaning small, was given him which lasted his entire life. This description was not indicative of him as a grown man however, for he grew and developed to a larger than ordinary stature of man, and the tallness of his soul was equal to his great physical height.
